

LARGE FARM.

It to the great farm in Colusa county will give a person something to do for some time after having made a of Dr. Glenn's farm, which contains 1500 acres, and has a river frontage of 1500 feet. There is 150 miles of fence on the place. His running stock consists of sheep, 800 of them imported; 250 cattle, besides his horses and work. This year Dr. Glenn is farming only 1500 acres. He rents to George Gupton 15,000 acres, to K. Gupton 10,000 and Isaac Bayless 7,000. Besides his Mr. Hoag owns 2,600 acres, and Gupton and Bayless about 3,500 each. The force employed by Dr. Glenn and his tenants is composed of 715 men in seeding, 490 in harvesting and 100 in threshing. The separators, threshing machines, engines, etc., would fit out most warehouse in the State. With exception of harvesters, Chinese are employed; they are not strong nor good for such work. The manner of farming is known to every one. It is the same as a large farm on a small one, the same of course, being done by machinery. It is done on a large scale. The farm, built by Mr. Hoag, is a mammoth. To work it requires a steam engine, 56 men, 7 headers, 21 header wagons and 96 horses. I watched the system of procedure with great interest. The "circle" was made. This was the start in which the machinery for threshing was placed. This circle embraced some five acres, and was made by the machines which cut the grain a few inches below the heads instead of at the stalk, as in reaping. When full, the header empties the load with one movement into the wagons. Each load fills a wagon of large capacity.—[Cor. Post.

THE GOD FOR THE DEAD.—A Nevada originally told the following, which is a reproduction of Harper's, for July, has been copied, spoiled and appropriated as his own. The writer is represented as having been at a hotel where all the rooms were taken, and in order to obtain lodgings he was obliged to accept a bunk in a room with a dozen others. Every countryman in the Coast is provided with one of "corral." The sleepers in the other were making "night hideous with their snoring" in varied cadences, some puffing, some long drawn nasal sounds, and all in such a way as to make a pandemonium in which no one who had not had a fair start with snoring, could possibly go to sleep. He heard for hours in perfect torture listen to the unnatural sounds, and was growing desperate when he became conscious of someone of another in a remote corner of the room who was equally annoyed. He was a stout and fussy old Frenchman whose nerves were all shattered by the snoring and who occasionally manifested his annoyance by mumbling to himself in disparaging of the situation. Finally, when the snoring were roaring in discordant confusion one who seemed to be the leader, and being the loudest, strangled, and gave a superhuman snort which waked himself, and was silent for a moment. This was the supreme moment, our snorer felt relieved, and presently in a low voice, in tones of evident self-gratification, murmuring with himself thus: "Tank you, God, for the dead."

MISSIONARIES FOR THE ZUNI INDIANS.—Mr. H. K. Palmer have been commissioned by the Board of Home Mission. to conduct a mission at the Zuni Pueblo. The most populous of the eighteen pueblos of the Zuni, in New Mexico, and the eastern of the group, being on the line between New Mexico and Arizona. Near by the present village, on top of a rock (Mesa), one thousand feet above the valley, are extensive stone ruins, the traditions of the people claim are remains of the city inhabited by their ancestors during the flood. They are worshippers of the sun and moon, like the Aztecs. The ladies of Colorado are busy with Mrs. Palmer's salary. These missionaries, together with their missions, are committed to the prayers of God's people.

Alta reports an interview with General Colton, of the Southern Pacific branch of the Central Pacific Railroad. Colton said some weeks ago, the Company was obliged to reduce the force, because the wishes and desires of the man that they had reduced their trains because the crops having failed through so much of the state, it had forced the company to this reduction. Business has been temporarily, so dull, in consequence of short crops, that it has been seriously considered to cease all railroad construction for some months. And this will, quite decided upon, with the exception of the new line from Bantas by the shore."
